1. The Original

Today's Hanusch Hospital - originally called Erzherzog Rainer Spital - was built in the war years of 1914 and 1915. This was very inconspicuous and barely noticed by the public, since the dedication was clearly military. But it was not just a military hospital, but a military hospital, the standard consciousness of K. u. K. officers should match.

The architects Heinrich Schmid and Hermann Aichinger were students of Otto Wagner and designed the hospital. Stylistically, the original hospital building is thus attributable to Viennese Modernism at the transition from historicism to Art Nouveau.

Since June 1945 the Wiener Gebietskrankenkasse manages the hospital on behalf of the Republic of Austria. On the occasion of this acquisition, it was renamed Hanusch Hospital.

Ferdinand Hanusch (1866-1923) was a trade unionist and from 1918 Social Minister of the 1st Republic. In the course of publicity (1981), the Vienna Regional Health Insurance Fund became the owner of the hospital.
